

Submitting an Event for Clocktower Con 2024

Before submitting events be sure to verify your user account settings. If you are concerned about your emailing being public you'll want to verify your username isn't set as your email and that Tabletop.Events knows to show your username instead of email.

If you'd like to submit an event that doesn't fit well into an existing category, please reach out to us at events@clocktowercon.com

Basic Information

All events, regardless of their type, require some basic information.

For Event Name, please give a short descriptive name. If it is a private event start the Event Name with the prefix [Private].

You'll then provide a short description of your game or event and a URL if needed. We'll ask for any BotC script links farther down so it isn't necessary to include it here.

From there you'll select your preferred and alternate start times for your events along with the duration of your event.

You'll then enter the max tickets or seats you want to allow for your event. Each event type will have different limits on this. For example, Blood on the Clocktower events are limited to 15 tickets while Board Game type is limited to 10.

For Spaces Needed, you will always select 1. Any events that specify more than 1 gaming space will be rejected.

Will event host also play the game is used to indicate if the host themselves would like to take up one of the tickets for the event. For most events the submitter should say no to this as they'll be hosting the event. The exception to this might be a submitter setting up a board game event that is limited by the number of players allowed by the game.

Reserved Tickets for Attendees is meant for Private Games. If you reserve tickets for an event your hosting, you'll need to invite your Tabletop.Events friends to the event.

Age Range -Please select the only option of Teen to Adult (13+). All events should be suitable for this age range.

Event Specific Information

After this basic information is completed you'll then be prompted to provide event specific information. For example, you'll be prompted for a Script Name, Script Link, and some other Clocktower related questions for Blood on the Clocktower and Teensyville Clocktower. If you need a Grimoire for a BotC event, you'll let us know here!

Note: For Clocktower events, please ensure you link to any homebrew or custom scripts using the script link field.

If you have any special requests, be sure to enter that in as well and then watch for additional communication from us after your submission.

Event Submission Rules

Read these rules before you agree to them. They'll provide you with an idea of what we expect from a Host or Storyteller at Clocktower Con 2024. If you don't follow the rules specified here, you may not be allowed to host events in the future.

Once you've completed all of the required fields and agreed to the event submission rules go ahead and create the event!

What happens next?

As events are submitted we'll review them and approve events we feel are appropriate. From there we'll use the tabletop.events platform to slot your event into an appropriate time and location within the gaming spaces based on your preferred times and size/type of your event. We expect to see a large influx of event requests early on and will take our time during this "rush" to ensure that events are handled in a way we feel comfortable so please do not expect to see your event immediately approved (or rejected). If you have questions or concerns you can either email events@clocktowercon.com or post in the #questions channel on our Discord

You can view your events by going to Host → Events I'm hosting. When you view a specific event note that you can Message Attendees and those on the Waitlist but we strongly urge you to not use this function unless you have a good reason for it. Additionally, attendees can message hosts. If you find that this is being abused in any way, please let us know.

Finally, if you need to see your full schedule of hosted events you can navigate to Attend → My Schedule
